Biographical Note

Franz Altschuler was born in Mannheim, Germany on October 2, 1923 to Mr. and Mrs. Heinrich (Henry) J. Altschuler. His father was born November 14, 1895. Franz Altschuler arrived in the United States in September 1936. Because he was foreign born, Altschuler had an extra step in being found acceptable for United States Armed Forces service. His Notice of Alien's Acceptability was issued January 18, 1943 by the local board in Queens County, New York, and he was inducted a few weeks later on February 4, 1943.

Upon completion of basic training at Camp Croft, South Carolina, Altschuler did a stint with Company E, 18th U.S. Infantry Regiment in North Africa and Sicily, then to England, then transferred to Company M, 18th U.S. Infantry Regiment, then received orders to report to G2, 1st Division. He was wounded in August 1944 and rejoined the 1st Division in September 1944. Altschuler was with the unit in Germany for V-E Day. In days after the war, he helped to sort civilians, soldiers and political prisoners, and performed interrogations in Czechoslovakia and Germany.

An artist from pre-war life, Altschuler carried the skills with him as a soldier. He drew the Mother's Day 1945 and division Christmas card for soldiers to send home and his drawings were also published by Stars & Stripes. His drawings were also used professionally in the military, having been included in military summaries.

He received his discharge from the armed services at Fort Dix in September 1945. He later enrolled at the Institute of Design in Chicago.

Scope and Content of the Collection

The Franz Altschuler Collection consists of letters, V-Mails, postcards, military documents, newspaper and magazine clippings, sketches and drawings, collectible cards, photocopies, pieces of artwork, undeveloped film rolls, and photographs. The majority of the collection relates to Altschuler's time in the armed services in World War II and just after V-E Day. Another portion of the collection including correspondence and identification cards pertain to Altschuler's father, Heinrich or Henry, and grandfather, Opa Z. Altschuler's artwork spans from his time in the service through 2005. Photocopies of original pieces are also included. The vast majority of photographs included in the collection were taken by Altschuler or found by him in Germany and Czechoslovakia. There are also four canisters of undeveloped film. A large collection of cigarette and gum cards is included. Many were loose, but some remain contained in an album put together by Altschuler in his youth. The loose cards have been arranged by sets and numbers in photonegative sleeves so both sides of the card can be viewed. A large portion of the collection is magazine and newspaper clippings. For the most part, they were in no discernible order, but a portion of them were filed in separate folders which were labeled by Altschuler. These materials were kept together, but arranged by date. All newspaper clippings have been photocopied. In addition, many of the clippings are oversized and have been placed in oversized boxes.

Arrangement

The majority of the collection arrived in no discernible order. A portion of the magazine and newspaper clippings were filed in separate folders which were labeled by Altschuler. These materials were kept together, but arranged by dates within their folder. For the rest of the collection's items, staff has arranged the collection. The collection consists of six series:

Series One: Biographical Material

This series contains letters, greeting cards, postcards, and V-Mails. Most letters from Altschuler to his family contain sketches of topics discussed in the letter. Altschuler often used V-Mails to draw more detailed pieces. Greeting cards Altschuler received have been arranged within the series. Also included are pieces of correspondence written in various languages. One folder contains postcards belonging to and sent by Altschuler's grandfather, Opa Ziegler. Some of these postcards are blank while the others have messages written in German. Military documents, paperwork, and forms of identification include items pertaining to Altschuler's enlistment and time spent in the service.

Series Two: Artwork

A portion of the artwork in this series was done by Altschuler during his time overseas in the service. While some drawings are of local scenery, the vast majority of sketches are drawings are depictions of soldiers, battle scenes and other armed service-related events. His later work, from the 1950s onward, begins to focus on other military eras and soldiers including medieval knights, the Revolutionary War, and the Civil War. This series also includes photocopies of Altschuler's original works, some of which are duplicates of pieces already included in the collection. Two larger collage pieces have been separated and placed with the Flat Files.

Series Three: Ephemera

Materials in the propaganda folder were collected by and labeled as German or U.S. psych warfare by Altschuler. This series also includes banknotes and various newspaper clippings. Altschuler photocopied various documents and pieces of artwork that are already included in the collection and wrote short notes on the papers to indicate what they are. A large collection of German-language cigarette cards, a hand-made album containing cigarette cards, and a collection of English-language gum cards are included.

Series Four: Reference Materials

This series contains clippings Altschuler collected from various magazines and newspapers, as well as postcards, envelopes, cards, and book pages. While some items were collected for general military interest, the majority of items contain images of uniforms and weapons which Altschuler used as reference material for his artwork. Items in the folders labeled Pre-World War I and World War II were in their own folders when the collection was received. For processing, they were kept together but arranged within the new folder. The Pre-World War I subseries also had oversized materials that have been separated and arranged in Series Six.

Series Five: Photographs

Many photographs in this series were taken by Altschuler. One group of photographs, which have been arranged in their own folder, came from film in a camera found by Altschuler in Germany during World War II. There are also four canisters of undeveloped film from Altschuler's time in and closely following World War II. Some photographs also pertain to Altschuler's father.

Series Six: Oversized Materials

Because Altschuler collected a large number of clippings from oversized magazines and newspapers, most of this series contains items that would otherwise be arranged with Series Four. The Pre-World War I subseries was collected in a labeled folder so those items have been kept together in their own box. The rest of the items share a box, but have been arranged into folders.
